APPENDIX 6

Councils' Accounts: A Summary of Electors' Rights

The basic position

By law¹ any person interested has the right to inspect an internal drainage board's accounts. If you are entitled and registered to vote in local council elections within the internal drainage area then you (or your representative) also have the right to ask the appointed auditor questions² about the board's accounts or object to³ an item of account contained within them.

The right to inspect the accounts

When your board has finalised its accounts for the previous financial year it must let you know that they are available for inspection. Having given reasonable notice of your intentions, you then have 20 working days to look through the accounting statements in the annual return and any supporting documents. By arrangement you will be able to inspect and make copies of the accounts and the relevant documents. You may have to pay a copying charge.

The right to ask the auditor questions about the accounts

You can only ask the appointed auditor questions about the accounts. The auditor does not have to answer questions about the board's policies, finances, procedures or anything else not related to the accounts. Your question must be about the accounts for the financial year just ended. The auditor does not have to say whether they think something the board has done, or an item in its accounts, is lawful or reasonable.

The right to object to the accounts

If you think that the board has spent money that they shouldn't have, or that someone has caused a loss to the board deliberately or by behaving irresponsibly, you can object to an item of account by sending a formal 'notice of objection' to the auditor, to the address below. The notice must be in writing. In it you must tell the auditor why you are objecting and what you want the auditor to do about it. The auditor must reach a decision on your objection. If you are not happy with that decision, you can appeal to the courts.

You may also object if you think that there is something in the accounts that the auditor should discuss with the board or tell the public about in a 'public interest report'. You must give your reasons in writing to the auditor at the address below and send a copy to the board. The auditor must then decide whether to take any action. The auditor does not have to, but usually will, give reasons for their decision and you cannot appeal to the courts. More information is available from the Audit Commission website (see below).

You should not use this 'right to object' to make a personal complaint or claim against your board. You should take these complaints to your local Citizens' Advice Bureau, local Law Centre or your solicitor. You may also be able to approach the Standards Committee of your Local authority if you believe a member of the board has broken the Code of Conduct for Members.

What else you can do

Instead of objecting, you can give the auditor information that is relevant to their responsibilities. For example, you can simply tell the auditor if you think that something is wrong with the accounts or about waste and inefficiency in the way the board runs its services. You do not have to follow any set time limits or procedures. The auditor does not have to give you a detailed report of their investigation, but they will usually tell you the outcome.

A final word

Internal drainage boards, and so local taxpayers, must meet the costs of dealing with questions and objections. In deciding whether to take your objection forward further, one of a series of factors the auditor must take into account is the costs that will be involved. They will only continue with the objection if it is in the public interest to do so. If you appeal to the courts, against an auditor's decision, you will have to pay for the action yourself.
